Download Details

Everyone in Rural Alaska is familiar with having a water tank in their homes. HughesNet does a similar thing with Internet. You are allotted a certain amount of data per day at high speed.(See Chart) For normal surfing and using the Internet, the amount of data is generally NEVER used. You cannot, however, go crazy and download multiple movies every day or you will use up the amount of data allotted to you for the day. (You will run out of water) Each day the amount of data is refreshed. This is called the FAP. One benefit about Rural Alaska Installations is that the FAP is lenient during late night Eastern Time Zone times, which are only 9pm-1am AKDT.

Contract Requirement Sharing

There is a 24 month contract associated with the system purchase. This means that there are high cancellation charges if you cancel the contract before completion.

This Internet Connection can be shared. However, each user must be careful not to exceed download limits which will affect all other users. We have installed this system in several offices with multiple users. Added equipment is necessary, but we can set this up for you. It is ideal for small offices, IRA's, Tribal Governments, and Small Business in Rural Alaska!
